UC BERKELEY RETIREMENT CENTER NEWSLETTER

A Message from Chancellor Berdahl

To each of you, I wish to express my personal appreciation for the academic excellence and renown you have provided to our university.

Whether you started your affiliation with the University of California many years ago as a student, or joined us as a faculty or staff member, your contributions have helped us to remain the world's leading academic and research institution.

The Retirement Center is one of the programs of which I am very proud, as well as one that has successfully supported one of my larger goals: enhancing the Cal Community. With that in mind, my hopes are that you will remain actively involved in our community, and that the Retirement Center will provide you with those opportunities as well as give back to you as you have given to us.

Please accept my warmest wishes and thanks.

What's News

We hope this newsletter finds you all well and enjoying 2004. As mentioned by Chancellor Berdahl, the Center has always had a guiding mission to ensure your continued connections with the Cal Community after retirement. The Cal Connection section highlights a variety of ways for you to do so. In this issue, we introduce a new program: a 15% discount on all UC Press books (p.2).

Center-Sponsored Events highlights our Learning in Retirement (LIR) series, now in its fourth year. We are offering three courses this spring: Should Society Expand School Choice for Ordinary Families?; Russia: What's New and Not So New; and Recent Developments in the Business Environment (p.4). Also highlighted is a new World Wide Web class that takes students beyond the basics taught in our beginner's session and a workshop called Crossing the Digital Divide that gives the basics about electronic gadgetry (p.5). Of special note is an educational excursion to the Monterey Bay Aquarium. Continued offerings include a docent-led tour at the Berkeley Art Museum and a workshop on Medicare and UC health benefits (p.5).

The On Campus section is filled with upcoming offerings, including: a one-day conference, Archiving the Past; a seminar on managing your prescription costs; CalFIT's 50+ classes; the Summer Sessions Senior Audit Card and information about Cal Day 2004. As well, we announce a new partnership with the campus Cal Corps program, which includes a call for volunteers (p.6).

Several Special Events are found on page seven. Cal Women's basketball is holding its second annual Retiree Day on Saturday, February 21st. The Association of Retirement Organizations in Higher Education (AROE), which the Center has helped to form, announces its second biennial conference later this year in Nashville, Tennessee. Closer to home in San Francisco, the American Society on Aging and the National Council on Aging are holding their joint annual meeting in April; they are seeking volunteers in return for free admission to the conference.

Finally, we want to recognize the passing of former Berkeley Chancellor and UC President Clark Kerr. Described by Chancellor Berdahl as "one of the most revered leaders in public higher education in the 20th Century," Kerr's vision was at the heart of the multicampus University of California. (See public memorial information on page 7.)

Center Sponsored Programs and Events

LEARNING IN RETIREMENT

Should Society Expand School Choice for Ordinary Families?

Organized by Professor Emeritus John E. Coons, School of Law

Parents of means determine which schools their children will attend by choosing a residence or by paying private-school tuition fees. Would it be good policy to subsidize choice among private and public schools for poor and working families? Would a system of state-subsidized choice offend federal and state constitutions? What would be the proper design for such a system? If there are pitfalls, can they be eliminated? Discussions of school “vouchers” are now politically alive in every state, but vouchers seem little understood by most journalists. Three Boalt Hall professors who have been studying proposals for school vouchers will discuss their pros and cons. All three wrote amicus briefs for the U.S. Supreme Court in the historic Zelman decision, their arguments anticipating the Court’s conclusion.

Thursdays, 2pm-4pm

March 4	Professor Emeritus John E. Coons: “Choice: What is It and Who Needs It?”
March 11	Professor Jesse Choper: “School Choice–Federal Constitutional Status”
March 25	Professor Emeritus John E. Coons: “Equal Access for all–How and Why?”
April 1*	Professor Stephen Sugarman: “Choice in the Government Sector”

Russia: What’s New and Not So New

Organized by Professor Emeritus Gregory Grossman, Department of Economics

Several issues continue to pervade Russia’s long-term and recent histories: uniformity versus variety, cohesion versus dispersion, inertia versus change, nationalism versus westernization. Four of Berkeley’s leading Russia scholars will explore these tensions against the realities of Russia’s geopolitical and geo-economic constraints and its legacies from the past. They will seek to examine Mr. Putin’s strong but ambivalent influences during the past four years. They will then speculate about the implications of his virtually certain reelection next March and about the implications of the December 2003 Duma election and its triumph of Russian nationalism, ranging from moderate to extreme.

Mondays, 2pm-4pm

March 22	Professor Emeritus David Hooson: “Russia’s Geographic Foundations”
March 29	Professor Yuri Slezkine: “Russian National Identity–Old and New”
April 5	Director Edward W. Walker: “Russia’s Muslims–Islam and Islamism after Communism”
April 12	Professor M. Steven Fish: “The Perils of Putin”

Recent Developments in the Business Environment

Organized by Professor Emeritus George Strauss, Haas School of Business

Four Haas professors plan to discuss some of the major issues facing businesses in America today and in the near future. David Vogel will focus on recent scandals, their causes and potential remedies. Fifteen years ago Japan’s system of employment relations was widely seen as unique and perhaps better than ours. James Lincoln has just returned from a year’s sabbatical leave in Kyoto and will explain how that system has changed. Meanwhile, the American system is changing in various ways that David Levine describes as, at best, “worrisome.” At the same time, American trade unions have been suffering losses in membership and clout. George Strauss will seek to explain why that has happened and will discuss recent attempts at revival.

Fridays, 2pm-4pm

April 23	Professor David Vogel: “The Challenge of Corporate Responsibility”
April 30*	Professor James Lincoln: “The Transformation of the Japanese Employment System”
May 7	Professor David I. Levine: “How New is the ‘New’ Employment Contract?”
May 14	Professor Emeritus George Strauss: “The Decline and Possible Revival of U.S. Unions”

Note: Although these LIR courses are free, pre-registration is required due to limited class size. Class location will be provided in your confirmation letter.

*Class will meet from 3pm-5pm.

Beginning with inflatable sculptures (designed in part for easy transportation), Ant Farm's projects later included the now famous Cadillac Ranch (1974) in Amarillo, Texas, realized with another principal Ant Farm member Hudson Marquez, and Media Burn (1975), the videotape documentation of a spectacular performance event in San Francisco.

Archiving the Past

Friday April 30 9am-4pm

Co-Sponsored by the Retirement Center, The Townsend Center for the Humanities, and The Bancroft Library.

What does the historian of the future want to see and what can we, should we, provide? To answer this question and the very practical one of what does the University want from its emeriti and retirees, or about-to-be-emeriti/retirees, in terms of their records: books and papers, scholarly, administrative, personal, accumulated over their years of service on the campus, University specialists—archivists and librarians—will offer advice.

Among the scheduled speakers on "Archiving the Past" will be David Lowenthal, author of The Past is a Foreign Country. He, and others will put before us some of the almost philosophical problems of dealing with the past itself from the earliest written records through the Florentine fourteenth century business documents, to the personal letters of Nobel Prize winning scientists.

Lunch will be served. For a detailed brochure, call the Center.

Fitness Classes Tailored to Those 50+
