“The Politics of California Air Pollution”

The Faculty Club

Robert F. Sawyer, Class of 1935 Professor of Energy Emeritus, Department of Mechanical Engineering, will speak on “The Politics of California Air Pollution” at the March 26 luncheon of the Emeriti Association.

His talk will draw from his experience at the California Air Resources Board (CARB) where he served as an appointee of both governors Brown and Schwarzenegger. CARB is a national and international model for innovative, science based environmental regulation.

Sawyer earned his B.S. and M.S. in mechanical engineering at Stanford University. After a stint in the Air Force, where he was involved in rocket propulsion research, he went on to Princeton to complete his PhD in Aerospace Science. He made his way to Berkeley in the mid-60s where he taught graduate and undergraduate courses until 1991. He continues to teach in the Freshman Seminar program at Berkeley.

Active in many professional associations, he has served on several EPA panels and committees, many National Academy of Science Committees, and as a consultant to both government and industry. In 1995 he was named Visiting Professor of Energy and the Environment at the University College, London, and from 2003-2005 served as Director, Study Center, London, for UC’s Education Abroad Program.

His research interests include combustion, fire safety, air pollution formation and control, energy and the environment, motor vehicle emissions and regulatory policy. Between teaching and doing research, he found time to write more than 350 publications and two books. He was elected to the National Academy of Engineering in 2007.

The Santa Barbara native is an avid skier, backpacker, and wildflower photographer. He and his wife, Barbara, split their time among their Oakland, Sacramento, and Lake Tahoe homes and traveling.
Chancellor Birgenau recently received an announcement from the Mellon Foundation that I have excerpted and share with members.

The Andrew W. Mellon Foundation invites the University of California, Berkeley to nominate candidates for the Foundation’s Emeritus Fellowships. The program, inaugurated in 2003, provides financial support for research by outstanding scholars in the humanities and humanistic social sciences who, at the time of taking up the award, will be officially retired but remain active and productive contributors. The intent is to extend the Foundation’s efforts to encourage the highest quality research to those who ordinarily are no longer eligible for funding.

Emeritus Fellows will receive funds for a year’s research and other related expenses. The University of California, Berkeley, may nominate up to three candidates. Nominations should reach the Foundation no later than May 9, 2011 and should result from an internal competition. Descriptions of the candidates’ plans for future research as well as their accomplishments to date are required. The Foundation requires a hard copy of the proposal sent to their New York office as well as a single pdf document (including the endorsement letter, proposal, budget, and short CV) directed to eil@mellon.org. A panel of distinguished scholars evaluates the nominees (as many as 30 Fellows can be chosen) with awards made in September.

Roger Glassey, President
Meet Your UCBEA Board - Part II

When he retired from the Dept. of Agricultural Economics, George Goldman joined UCBEA and a few years later agreed to serve as treasurer. While on campus, Professor Goldman’s role was different from faculty who teach, conduct research and publish original research. As a Cooperative Extension Specialist (and UC employee with academic rank), his focus was on using economics to solve problems at county, city, and state level. UC Riverside and Davis also have similar programs. He values the programs offered by the Retirement Center and advocates programs which allow Association members to support the University and the community.

Professor Richard Herr, an at-large member, joined UCBEA at the time he retired from the Dept. of History because “it seemed like the right thing to do.” He enjoys serving on the Board and likes the lively discussions of the board meetings. Together with Barbra Davis, he co-chairs the mentoring committee and is working on having a questionnaire in members’ hands to gauge their interest in the concept; the key question being ‘to whom do we offer mentoring services.’ Herr likes the variety of speakers who headline the luncheon meetings and appreciates the wealth of resources active and retired faculty offer.

Sue Cork defines her board role as steward somewhat humorously: “we’re lackeys.” She or her colleagues staff the reception table at UCBEA luncheons, checking in those who made reservations, distributing name tags, etc. Her husband Bruce Cork was a member of the Dept. of Physics, and, in part, her motivation to participate in UCBEA was to stay in touch with friends. “I’m very broad-minded so I like the wide range of topics and speakers at the meetings, but I would like to see more new faces attending. It’s good to have fresh ideas and new recruits to keep us ‘seasoned members’ energized.”

Ears and Eyes Pay Attention to Sound

Professor Emeritus John Ohala pays lots of attention to sound—the sounds of human speech as he amply demonstrated at the February meeting of the Emeritus Association. After an overview of the various sub-categories that make up what we generally refer to as “language,” Ohala explained that his field unites phonetics and historical linguistics. His particular focus is studying how the sound of language changes over time.

Recognizing that there are various theories about how sound changes occur and spread, Ohala supports the theory that change is the result of the listener mis-hearing or mis-interpreting what others have said. With the assistance of two audience volunteers, Professor Ohala, using a computer software program called PRAAT, demonstrated how speech sounds can be recorded and viewed on the computer screen as sound pressure variation and then modified. He called the process doing “microsurgery” on speech.

In concluding his remarks, Ohala brought his presentation close to home, stating that Benjamin Ide Wheeler, the first chair of the short-lived Dept. of Linguistics (1901-06), and the namesake for Wheeler Hall, invited world famous phoneticians who also studied how speech changes over the centuries to the UC campus. Another early pioneer in the field was Alfred Kroeber, whose work focused primarily on Native American languages. An interesting sidenote was Ohala’s comment that it is likely that UC Berkeley is the only university to have two buildings named after two linguists, Wheeler and Kroeber.
